Doctors are finding new techniques every day to save people's lives. One of these techniques is organ donation. Organ donation is the replacement of a non-working organ of a person with a working organ. However, this technique cannot always be performed due to a large number of people in need, and the patient who cannot find the necessary organ dies. The reasons why the organs that patients need cannot be found are the high number of patients in need and the people who will donate organs and their families do not want to donate.

First of all, with the development of technology organ donation has become widespread. Organ donation is a really courageous choice. People who want to donate their organs can sign a few documents and allow this before they die. This process is very easy. Apart from that, organs can be donated while living. For instance the kidneys. Kidneys are one of the most common organ donations. A person who donates one kidney can survive with the remaining kidney. Organ donation after death, which is another issue, can be made for almost any organ.

Secondly, organ donation is a very good humanitarian thing. Donated organs can restore a child's future or extend the life of a very successful person. Every person should have this thought when donating their organs. Organ donation is a really challenging process. Only in the end can a person's life be saved. Most people wanted to be superheroes as kids, but we don't have the same powers as the superheroes we watch on TV. However, thanks to organ donation, we can save the lives of hundreds of thousands of people in need in the world.

Another situation is people who are against organ donation. Some people don't want to donate the organs of their parents, siblings, or couples. There are several reasons for this. The first of these is religion and belief. Some people believe that because of their religion, they should bury the body as a whole or burn it. Another reason is that the person to whom the organ will be donated cannot be known. One of the reasons people do not choose organ donation is the inability to be sure that they will donate to a criminal or an evil person after they die.

In short, organ donation is a very useful and life-saving thing for humans. Although most people in general choose to donate their organs, some people do not want to donate their own or family member's organs for a number of reasons. Moreover, the number of people in need of organ donation in the world is quite high. In order to solve this problem and treat people in need, the number of people who donate organs should increase.
